

YVR Art Foundation awards $50,000 in scholarships to Indigenous artists

RICHMOND, B.C. (May 3, 2018): YVR Art Foundation (YVRAF) is pleased to announce the 10 BC and Yukon Indigenous recipients of the 2018 YVR Art Foundation scholarship awards. The recipients will be recognized at the annual YVRAF awards event, which will also include the unveiling of the 2017 scholarship recipients' art work at Vancouver International Airport (YVR) on May 25, 2018.

"It is with great pleasure that we are awarding the 2018 scholarships to such a well-deserving group of individuals," said Susan Jackson, Executive Director, YVR Art Foundation. "For 13 years, winning a YVR Art Foundation scholarship has provided early recognition and support for young and mid-career artists, many of whom have gone on to thriving art careers. We are excited to encourage a new generation of artists in their creative and professional development."

YVRAF art scholarships are awarded annually to artists of British Columbia and Yukon Indigenous ancestry in two categories: Youth (under age 27) and Mid-Career (ages 27 and up). The recipients will receive a $5,000 scholarship to attend a formal art institution or study with an artist mentor over the course of one year. Mid-Career recipients will work with a master artist, attend an art institution or undertake a special project that is of cultural significance to their community. At the end of their scholarship year, recipients are invited back to Vancouver to display their artwork at the awards event, followed by an exhibition of their work at YVR for one year.

The recipients of the 2018 YVR Art Foundation Youth Art Scholarships are:

- Emma Frank, age 23, K'omoks, Namgis, Eh-ChoDene, from Comox
- Sage Nowak, age 25, Tahltan/Vuntut Gwitchin, from Whitehorse
